

“My hypothesis about the moment when Archimedes discovered the lever”

By Andrea Garrido

My friend Aristotle and I were taking a relaxing cup of coffee in the garden of my house, trying to develop the first logical formalization, but to be honest the merit belongs to him. Philosophy isn't my strong point. Newton had also been invited to the meeting, but he slept under the shadow of an Apple tree. Aristotle spoke without stopping, looking continuously for pencil and paper. I sank in my thoughts and looking around I saw the several giant rocks spread out in the garden. I had order to build a well. I began thinking... the built-men had a very strange form to move each rock, they took them between 4 or 5 men, and yet when they put every Stone in the correct place they had a comfortable feeling in their arms because all the strength goes to the back. They are crazy, they just need a foothold. Having no part in it, I triggered a big step for back pain and, naturally, for humanity. I shouted "Aristotle, give me a lever and a fulcrum on which to place it, and I shall move the world!" suddenly, Aristotle looked at me and I ran to draw my brilliant idea, but both had to stop what we were doing because an Apple beaten Newton.

Who was the real inventor of the lever?

By Andrea Garrido

Give me a lever and a fulcrum on which to place it, and I shall move the world!"- told me the Chocolate God. I thought that this man was crazy but he started to explain me:

- This world is very boring with this big mass of land called "Pangea". If you give me a lever I will separate them and it will be more funny. Against all odds, the argument of my friend convinced me and as the Sun was getting closer and I will melt in a short period of time I decided to let him my giant lever. We made a big effort and we separated the mass into different continents. In that moment, fragments of rocks involved in fire began to fall everywhere. the consequences were unbelievable. We were murders, the created life on the earth start dying very quickly. Every reptile covered my gills loose their food and sank on the ocean. The Black chocolate God , The White Chocolate God and the Gods Chocolate/Lemon and Coffee/Milk ones came to create an assembly to punish us, but there wasn't turning back The Sun was getting closer and each of us were melting down the atmosphere spreading each delicious part of our body in the middle of chaos.
